1. Claims 1-4, 6-9, 11-90, 83-145 and 155 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:
 - a. Applicant discloses a system to accommodates and facilitates a wide range of commercial arrangements between system participants concerning the conversion of debt obligations into electronic promissory notes. Applicant's invention is novel and innovative in the sense that a creditor participant on an electronic invoice may specify that confirmation causes the invoice to automatically become an electronic promissory note, which is freely transferable. In addition, a creditor participant and a debtor participant on an electronic invoice may agree that confirmation causes an electronic invoice to automatically become an electronic promissory note. Further, a debtor participant and a creditor participant may agree that after confirmation the electronic invoice remains a bilateral contract pursuant to which an electronic promissory note may be issued after the debtor participant gives an additional consent. Kolling et al (U.S. Patent No. 6,385,595) the closest prior art teach an electronic statement presentment system is disclosed that allows billers and other entities to efficiently and cost effectively deliver electronic statements to respective consumers of their services and products.
